Ministerial Conference on Global Open Data for Agriculture and Nutrition

The conference focused on “Catalyzing Agricultural Transformation for Inclusive Growth” under the theme “Harnessing the demographic dividend through investment in food and nutrition data.” The Conference was co-convened by the Government of Kenya, Radeecal Communications and GODAN Secretariat. The conference had invited 1,000 high level participants, led by Ministers for Agriculture from 100 countries, private sector, academia, think-tanks, civil society, youth organisations, research networks and development practitioners, the United Nations and multilateral institutions especially the African Development Bank (AfDB), UN Economic Commissions for Africa, Asia and Latin America, the African Union Commission, Africa’s Regional Economic Communities (RECs) and international organizations.

The high-level meeting underlined the need to make agricultural and nutritional data available, accessible, usable and unrestricted in order to facilitate planning in agriculture. This, they noted, will increase opportunities of data-driven agricultural growth for posterity. Delegates in the conference which was hosted by the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Fisheries, included several Agriculture Ministers from Africa, Executive Director of Godan Andre Laperriere, President of the Alliance for Green Revolution in Africa (AGRA) Dr. Agnes Kalibata, academicians, researchers and private sector entrepreneurs.

The Ministerial conference sought to mobilize high level political support to ensure availability, accessibility and usability of data for agricultural planning and decisionmaking in the global south. More specifically, the conference sought to:
